WHAT DO I ENJOY MOST ABOUT DRAMA AND THEATRE?

List 10 things that you enjoy the most about Drama and Theatre. You might find it quite easy to start with, as you head towards completing all 10 you might have to think more deeply about what Drama and Theatre is. Why are they both in the title of the A level and what is the difference between them?

So you are about to begin or continue your journey as a drama student, this will involve researching, note taking, discussion work, extended writing tasks and presentations. Don't worry it is all routed in practical exploration and performance. Therefore it may be useful to think about which areas which will require more development from you, both before and during the course.

List any study skills that you feel less confident with below. This will really help your teachers identify any extra resources or support that you might need.

ORGANISATION IS THE KEY!

How to be organised for and in lessons:

- Number and date all of your notes and handouts to keep them in order.
- Use a folder and file dividers to separate each component for coursework and the written papers.
- Create folders on the computer/laptop for each component.
- Take responsibility for catching up if you miss a lesson due to illness. Find the resources that you missed and also photocopy a friend's written notes, or catch up with them on the practical work missed. Email your teacher for any resources you might have missed out on due to your absence.
- If you don't feel confident about a particular area, consult your teacher. Never be afraid to ask for help if you don't understand.
- Always come prepared to class, wear comfortable clothes you can move in and appropriate non-marking soft shoes / trainers, bringing writing equipment, class notes from previous lessons, and/or previous coursework.
- Ensure you have handed in work for the set deadline. Email your teacher at least 24 hours in advance if you need an extension.
- If at any point you feel overwhelmed by the work – call for help – let's keep the drama in the lesson!

KEY WORDS USED IN OCR COMPONENTS

Below are the most common command words used by the exam board when introducing coursework tasks or within the written exams’.

Command words	Meaning
Analyse	Separate information into components and identify their characteristics. Discuss the pros and cons of a topic or argument and make reasoned comments.
Compare and contrast	Show the similarities and differences.
Conclude	Make a decision after reasoning something out.
Define	Give the meaning of.
Describe	Give a detailed account of.
Differentiate	Explore and explain the differences.
Discuss	Explore the subject by looking at the advantages and disadvantages.
Explain	Describe, giving reasons and causes.
Evaluate	Give an opinion by exploring the good and bad points.
Identify	Recognise or prove something as being certain.
Illustrate	Show by explaining and giving examples.
Interpret	Explain the meaning by using examples and opinions.
Justify	Give good reasons for offering an opinion or reaching a conclusion.
Outline	Concentrate on the main points of the topic or item.
Summarise	Give the main points of an idea or argument. Leave out unnecessary details.

HOW TO RESEARCH EFFECTIVELY

Steps In Conducting Research

In order to carry out research effectively you need to follow these steps:

- Identify the purpose of the research – ask the following questions
 - What am I trying to find out?
 - Who is the information for?
 - Where will I get the information from?
 - How will I analyse and interpret the information I collect?
 - How will I present the results of my research?
- Produce a plan which includes:
 - the purpose of the research
 - what information needs to be collected
 - methods to be used for collecting the information
 - identification of potential sources of information which could include the designing of questionnaires, tests etc
 - methods to be used for analysing and interpreting the information
 - deadlines for completion of various stages of the research
 - evidence of review of completed research
- Collect the information you require ensuring that it is reliable and relevant.
 - keep a log of all references as you go at the end of your document, add to it each time you find something relevant or use something new; this could be books, journals, interviews, websites etc...
- Analyse and interpret the information and check that it is providing you with the information that you require i.e. does it meet the purpose of the research.
- Review your research and consider whether it has enabled you to achieve the overall purpose.
- Present your findings. This may be, for example, as a report or as a presentation.

TRANSITION TASKS

SUMMER TRANSITION WORK HAND IN WEEK: 11th – 15th SEPTEMBER

TASK 1

1. Research Konstantin Stanislavski and his system for acting and developing an authentic character, in particular focus on the following giving a definition and an example of each:

Given Circumstances, The 'Magic If', Objective, Super-Objective, Through Line, Physical Action, Improvisation, Emotion Memory, Tempo Rhythm.

2. Now research Bertolt Brecht and his Epic Theatre techniques. Again define the following terms and give examples of how these can be used within theatre:

Narration, Direct Address, Third Person narrative, Speaking the Stage Directions, Multi-roling, Split-role, Placards, Minimal and Simple Design Elements (set, costume, props), Symbolic Props, use of Song and Dance, Gestus.

TASK 2

1. Practically Exploring Stanislavski's System - The Circus Performer

Aim

To create the character of a circus performer and design and perform a circus act.

- Choose a character that performs in the circus.
- Create the before time for your character. Where you grew up, how you ended up with the circus, include a few childhood memories that led your character to joining the circus. If your character is a knife thrower, you could imagine that your father collected knives and on Sundays he would practise throwing them at a tree. Your character would watch with fascination as the knife flew through the air before imbedding itself in the tree.
- Research your character and the skills and training needed for your act. Phineas Taylor Barnum for example. (Remember base your character on fact and use your imagination to create the character.) Page - VII

- Decide on your character's super objective from the outset, communicate this through action and dialogue (for example internal monologue).
- Start to rehearse your act, decide on an objective and action, creating the given circumstances. You will need to design an impressive act to satisfy the audience, hungry to be amazed.
- Imagine what you can hear, touch, taste, smell and see. The circus big top will have very distinctive smells; you will hear music, children and families laughing.
- For this exercise you will imagine you are performing in front of a packed house. Imagine the audience all around you and how you want them to react to your show.
- Rehearse your act several times; build in the interaction with the audience and others in the ring. If you are a lion tamer you will need to imagine the lions and your relationship with them. You would train with them nearly every day and have a good understanding of their behaviour.
- You can start to think about your costume and if you are showing your circus performer to the class you can design and wear a costume.
- If you are showing your circus act to an audience remember that in the Big Top there would be hundreds in the audience and music and clowns etc.

Be creative with this exercise and really use your imagination. Where is your character from? As the character imagine an eventful past that led you to the circus. Create an impressive act that will thrill the audience. Think about how your character would use movement and voice to fill the whole big top. Enjoy the performance and enjoy the character, it's not every day you get to join the circus!

2. Present your research and keep a brief log of how you developed your character and performance.

1. If you were to perform your circus act one last time, but this time in the style of Brecht's Epic Theatre how would it differ? What would you add in? Or leave out? Or change and develop so that it has a different emphasis? Why? Ensure that you identify key aspects of Epic Theatre to back up your ideas and points.

2. Now research Frantic Assembly and the founders Scott Graham, Steven Hogget and Vicki Middleton. Identify and describe their process of devising and key features of their work including:

Storytelling, Physical Theatre, Building Blocks, Choreography, An Observer, Simplify

3. You are now going to apply present day influences to your 'circus performance', you are particularly influenced by the work of Frantic Assembly. In an ideal world how would you develop your performance using storytelling and the building block technique?

Practically Exploring Stanislavski's System - The Circus Performer

Aim

To develop the character of a circus performer, design and perform a circus act in a different style.

- Simplify your performance to 10 movements, rehearse it so that you are performing it on a loop.
 - Now change the level of the performed movements, if you were stood now sit down, how does this change the movement? Develop it so it works.
 - What if you slow down the pace? Does the movement become fearful? Dangerous?
 - What if the movement happens in an empty lift? Or in a busy lift? Does that change things? (so restrict your movement, make it smaller).
 - In a kitchen? In a field in the middle of a football match?
 - Choose your final developments from your improvisations to finalise your performance.
 - Now add a monologue over the top of the performance. Tell us the story of this performer in the third person, use the information that you gathered about this character in Task 2 to help you.
4. How has this now changed your performance? How do the three performances differ? Your Stanislavski original, your developed Epic Theatre version and your Frantic Assembly version? How far could you take the set, lighting and perhaps even some accompaniment for your final version? Would you add more actors for example?

Which is your favourite style for your performance? Naturalism, Epic Theatre or Physical Theatre Storytelling? Why?
